

Alabaster House

Mission Statement

The mission of Alabaster House is to provide spiritual resources to government leaders in our nation’s capital through confidential prayer, biblical devotionals, and friendship.

Most leaders in Washington, D.C. have substantial workloads, coupled with significant time away from family and home. This creates great strain on their lives emotionally, spiritually, and physically.

Alabaster House provides strategic ministry to help sustain the faith and families of government leaders through chapels, prayer, retreats, bipartisan coffees, fellowship, gatherings, and personal ministry.

What are Government Leaders Saying About Alabaster House?

“This is a unique function that I don’t think any other ministry here provides that level of refuge, not just mentally, but spiritually and physically, to be able to get out of this political rat race at times when you really need it.”

Congressman Barry Loudermilk GA-11

Executive Director and Founders, Kimberly and Randy Genau have been serving government leaders and their families since 1998.
